Black print
Linocut, ink on paper

Each line was cut by hand from the lino block, so the geometry glows as white paper against the dark surface. Rough, expressive carving in the columns contrasts with the precise pattern at the center. The work looks at the tension between order and the human hand.